Maternal mental health screening

Quick reference guide

Overview

The law requires licensed health care professionals who provide prenatal and/or postpartum care to perform a maternal mental health screening at least once during pregnancy and an additional screening during the first 6 weeks of the postpartum period.

Additional postpartum screenings should be conducted as medically necessary and clinically indicated in the judgment of the licensed health care professional.

Guidelines for maternal mental health screenings

The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists (ACOG) recommends OB-GYNs and other obstetric health care professionals screen patients for depression and anxiety at the initial prenatal visit, later in pregnancy and at postpartum visits using a standardized, validated tool.

Clinical staff should be prepared to start medical therapy and/or refer patients to appropriate behavioral health resources.

How to perform maternal mental health screenings

The state of California and ACOG recommend you use the following guidelines when performing maternal mental health screenings:

- Use the Patient Health Questionnaire (PHQ-9) and Edinburgh Postnatal Depression Scale (EPDS) tool during pregnancy and/or the postpartum period
 - Read the instructions and test before giving and scoring the test
- Refer the member to behavioral health and/or substance abuse services as needed
 - Monitor the referral process to help ensure the member successfully receives treatment

Quality monitoring for maternal mental health care

The UnitedHealthcare of California quality team reviews medical records to help ensure you are complying with maternal mental health screening requirements. They assess records for mental health screening during the patient's second or third trimester and/or at the postpartum visit.
